

Pathway to Peace Minneapolis, MN

Seven sculptural cairns were installed to connect the East Harriet neighborhood with the Lake Harriet Peace Garden. Each sculpture contains text representing the community's feelings about the meaning of peace. The sculptures are constructed from limestone and other stones and each is a different variation upon the traditional cairn form. The seven sculptures form a wayfinding route and visual path from the neighborhood to the Peace Garden.

Ingraham and Associates and Teri Kwant worked with the neighborhood and the Minneapolis Park Board to create the design, prepare construction plans and specifications and manage the fabrication and installation. The sculptures were completed and dedicated in June, 2003.

Reference: Mary Altman
Public Arts Administrator
350 South Fifth Street
City Hall, Room 210
Minneapolis, MN 55415
(612) 673-3006

One of the seven cairns marking the Pathway to Peace in Lake Harriet Park, Minneapolis, MN